The background of the advertisement is a high-angle photograph of a cableway descending a steep, rocky mountain. Two cable cars are visible: one in the upper right, suspended from a large, complex metal support structure, and another further down the line, closer to a small village in a valley below. The mountain slopes are rugged and partially covered with green vegetation. In the distance, snow-capped mountain peaks are visible under a cloudy sky. The overall scene conveys a sense of adventure and scenic beauty.

For Swarovski Crystal Worlds, the multimedia artist André Heller designed 18 underground Chambers of Wonder dedicated to the versatile artistic interpretation of the material crystal. Kids can explore a play tower, run through a hedge maze, and ride a carousel that would look at home in the palace of any make-believe kingdom. Adults can join in on the fun too, then marvel at the beauty of the Alps from an observation deck or even explore Roman ruins on the site.

Includes: Entrance fee to Swarovski Crystal Worlds.
